

Gone are the days when you must shovel snow just to get the car out of the garage; no more shoveling snow off of porches, steps and sidewalks, no more heart attacks, no more slipping around on icy streets, ~~no more motors stalling in cold weather~~, no more flu and pneumonia due to being caught in the rain, no more heavy overcoats to tug around, no more hats, gloves, umbrellas, overshoes and boots no more dangerous streets to cross when the children go to school.

In the average Victory City, it will be possible to go from any one place to any other, anywhere in the building in only 5 to 10 minutes and without any hurrying. The number of automobile accidents that will be eliminated will stagger the imagination for the simple reason that auto travel will be limited to travel between Victory City and other cities. Within Victory City all the transportation will be elevators for the vertical transportation and electric cars for horizontal transportation. The electric cars will be so safe that even children will be allowed to drive them. Distances will be so short on any one floor that most people will probably walk most of the time. The safe and free elevators, I presume, will be used constantly by most everyone.

In a matter of seconds, these high speed elevators can drop you down to the first floor, and the minute you step outside the building, you are more than outside, you are in the country, breathing clean, clear, fresh country air. There will be no other building in sight, not even a farmhouse because the farm operator will live in Victory City in style.

There will be a wide variety of living accommodations. There will be some thing for everyone, and something for everyone's pocketbook from the least expensive to the most expensive and everything in between. The least expensive will be a ward for perhaps 50 people. Each would have a bunk and small locker. All 50 would share the same bathroom. There would be wards for men, wards for women, for students, for the retired and elderly, for the poor, for surplus population as temporary quarters, etc.

IF WINKING, BLINKING AND NOD SHOULD TRAVEL OVER VICTORY CITY BY MOONLIGHT, BELOW IS WHAT THEY WILL SEE.
